

LEED ENDORSEMENT

Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design

LEED (leadership in energy and environmental design) is a leading-edge system certifying the greenest performing buildings in the world. LEED is administered by the U.S. Green Building Council (USGBC) on a 100 point scale designating buildings on levels including “certified”, “silver”, “gold”, and “platinum.” LEED represents the industry standard for green building certification and is incorporated into mandatory building regulations as well widely used as a voluntary benchmark. There are currently over 3,000 LEED certified commercial buildings representing over 385 million square feet.

$300 Billion represents the projected potential renovation and new construction markets in 2010. As the costs of integrating energy efficient technologies into the construction process decreases, demand for LEED certification will increase. Fidelity National Financial supports the important movement towards energy efficient building by offering a “LEED Endorsement.”

The LEED Endorsement insures the owner and/or lender of a LEED certified project that all certification prerequisites and required points for certification at the certification level represented were met and that the USGBC granted final certification.
